The settlement in the U.S. versus Microsoft case falls short of the mark. Microsoft must allow other companies to compete in their market. Microsoft must take responsibility for it's actions in the computer industry.

As an informed computer user/developer/researcher, I would hesitate to suggest that the U.S. government back a corporation that generates revenue by encouraging stagnation in the american software community.

The settlement fails to inhibit or accurately classify Microsoft's behaviour. Therefore, do not accept the settlement as it stands.
